CHILD ABUSE

All members of the Make it! education ltd staff should be alert to the possible signs of abuse of a child or young person. Abuse may take several forms, which are not mutually exclusive:

Physical abuse may involve hitting, shaking, throwing, poisoning, burning or scalding, drowning, suffocating, or otherwise causing physical harm to a child.

Physical harm may also be caused when a parent or carer fabricates the symptoms of, or deliberately induces, illness in a child.

Emotional abuse is harder to detect and may result from conveying to a child that they are worthless, teasing or humiliation, the denial of love and affection, interests or friendships. It may include developmentally inappropriate expectations being imposed on children including interactions that are beyond a child's developmental capability or over protection and the limitation of opportunities to explore and learn.

Emotional abuse can include seeing or hearing the ill treatment of another person, bullying (including on-line bullying) and the exploitation or corruption of children. Some level of emotional abuse is involved in all types of maltreatment of a child, but it may occur alone.

Sexual abuse involves forcing or enticing a child or young person to take part in sexual activities, not necessarily involving a high level of violence, whether or not the child is aware of what is happening. The activities may involve physical contact, or non-contact activities, such as involving children in looking at, or in the production of, sexual images, watching sexual activities, encouraging children to behave in sexually inappropriate ways, or grooming a child in preparation for abuse (including via the internet). Sexual abuse is not solely perpetrated by adult males. Women can also commit acts of sexual abuse, as can other children.

Neglect is the persistent failure to meet a child's basic physical and/or psychological needs, such as the provision of adequate food, clothing and shelter (including exclusion from home or abandonment), protection from physical and emotional harm or danger, adequate supervision (including the use of inadequate care-givers), and access to appropriate medical care or treatment.

There will be other circumstances, not amounting to abuse, which give cause for serious concern about the welfare of children and young people. Questions of the young person being in moral danger, being uncared for, engaging in antisocial or inappropriate behaviour and so on should be referred to Somerset Direct or the child or young person's lead professional from the referring partner.

All Make it! staff and volunteers receive Level 2 safeguarding training.

Lucy Gibbons is our qualified Designated Safeguarding Lead.
